The Memory Disorders Clinic at Hebrew Rehabilitation Center in Boston offers a comprehensive evaluation of memory disorders, including Alzheimer's Disease and other types of dementia. Our highly trained staff takes a whole person, comprehensive approach to memory loss, with an emphasis on patient and family education and support. A social worker also works with family caregivers to ensure optimal health and emotional well-being as they cope with their loved one's memory loss.

Our three-visit program includes...

1. An initial meeting with a board-certified geriatrician who will review your medical history, take a detailed history of memory concerns, assess your functional abilities, and perform a mental status exam. You and your family member will also meet with the social worker.
2. A meeting with a neuropsychologist, which may include testing to determine the type and severity of memory loss.
3. A follow-up meeting with our geriatrician and social worker to discuss a diagnosis, treatment, and follow up recommendations.
